Could Your Cell Phone Help Shield You From Alzheimer's?

Cell phone addicts of the world, listen up: Electromagnetic waves emanating from these ubiquitous gadgets may prevent or even reverse Alzheimer's disease, researchers say.

Normal mice who had long-term exposure to such electromagnetic waves avoided developing Alzheimer's, while mice who were already sick started getting better, scientists report in the Jan. 6 issue of the Journal of Alzheimer's Disease.

Healthcare Spending Historically Slow

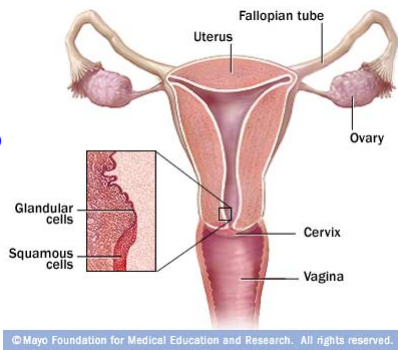

Health care spending rose to a whopping $2.3 trillion in 2008 -- 16.2 percent of the nation's economy -- but Americans paid less than one-eighth of the total spending out-of-pocket while government and private insurers split the rest, according to a newly released government report.

Spending per person totaled $7,681, with individuals paying roughly $912 of that, according to the report by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. The government and private insurance companies paid for the remaining costs.

January is National Cervical Cancer Awareness Month

The United States Congress designated January as Cervical Health Awareness Month. During January, you may wish to highlight issues related to cervical cancer, HPV disease and the importance of early detection. Some of the issues you may wish to highlight are personal stories of women and family members/caregivers battling issues related to their persistent HPV/precancer and/or cervical cancer.
